Effort to replace MEAP test goes to governor

LANSING – The Senate on Thursday sent the governor legislation that would replace the Michigan Educational Assessment Program test for high-school students with a test based on a college-entrance exam and tie the Michigan Merit Award Scholarship to the results of the new test, announced Sen. Van Woerkom, a package sponsor.

Van Woerkom sponsored Senate Bill 1156, which would require an 11th-grade student, beginning in the 2006-2007 school year, to receive qualifying results in each subject area component of the new test in order to be eligible for a Michigan Merit Award Scholarship.

“This bill improves the Michigan Merit Award scholarship program by using a national test that is recognized by colleges and universities, making the results more meaningful to them,” said Van Woerkom, R-Norton Shores. “Replacing the MEAP test will help to better prepare our students for success in the 21st Century economy.”

The proposed test, called the Michigan Merit Exam, would use a combination of a college-admissions test, a workplace skills exam and a social-studies component. The test would first be given to students in 2007. The effort is supported by a broad coalition of state leaders in secondary and post-secondary education. The college-admissions test to be used isn’t specified in the legislation.

The change is needed because the MEAP turnaround time is too long for teachers to take advantage of results to improve student achievement. Colleges and universities also do not consider it when making admissions decisions.

The legislation now heads to the governor for consideration.
